

Preamble

This file demonstrates how `icite` can be used to produce an index of passages cited without using either `BIBTEX` or `BibLATEX`.

The relevant part of the preamble which is used here follows:

```
1 \usepackage[defaultindex=none, nobibengine]{icite}
2 \IndexSubtypeAs{ancient}{icite-nobiblatex-primary}
3 \bibinput{bibsampl}
4
5 \usepackage{classics}
6 \newclassic{plat}{#1|#1|#1}
7 \newclassic{arist}{#1|\textit{#1}|#1}
8
9 \usepackage[xindy]{imakeidx}
10 \makeindex[name=icite-nobiblatex-primary, title={Index locorum citatorum}]
```

Remarks

- (a) `defaultindex=none` disables indexing by default.
- (b) `nobibengine` instructs `icite` to insert the citations in the body text without using either `BIBTEX` or `BibLATEX`.
- (c) `\IndexSubtypeAs{ancient}{icite-nobiblatex-primary}` makes an exception for authors whose `entrysubtype` field matches the string `ancient` and instructs `icite` to have them indexed in an index named `icite-nobiblatex-primary`.
- (d) To actually produce the index, `\printindex[icite-nobiblatex-primary]` is needed at the end of the document.
